

Doctrine on the Holy Trinity

God is the most perfect being, the highest, best Good, who exists from all eternity, by whom heaven and earth are created, and from whom all things derive and hold life and existence, for of Him and by Him and in Him are all things (Rom. xi. 36)

“The mystery of the Trinity cannot be comprehended by the human intellect, no one however eloquent can exhaust it; if entire books were written about it, so that the whole world were filled with them, yet the unspeakable wisdom of God would not be expressed.” (St. Martin) God who is indescribable, can in no way be described. When the human mind ceases to speak of Him then it but begins to speak.’ Therefore the true Christian throws his intellect under the feet of faith, not seeking to understand that which the human mind can as little comprehend, as a tiny hole in the sand can contain the immeasurable sea. An humble and active faith will make us worthy some day in the other world, to see with the greatest bliss this mystery as it is, for in this consists eternal life, that by a pious life we may glorify and know the only true God, Christ Jesus His Son, and the Holy Ghost.” Fr. Leonard Goffine, pp. 407-8 Explanation of the Epistles and the Gospels
